Examination of Lawyers In Ye Olden Times

Many men, even successful members of the profession, hold that, as a good examination does not necessarily make a good lawyer, it is better to make the conditions of admission easy and thus allow the fittest of the lot to survive. This sentiment has been less since the American Bar Association took up vigorously the work of raising the standards of legal education. Many good anecdotes are told of the old tests. An able Southern lawyer still living has a good story about his examination by Reverdy Johnson, one of the greatest lawyers of the last century. Mr. Johnson knew the young man, but apparently he did not allow his familiarity to influence the case. He asked him one or two questions as easy as the alphabet or the multiplication table, and then very severely demanded:

"Young man, can you mix a good brandy?"

"I think I can, sir," was the reply.

"There," pointing to the sideboard, "are the ingredients, sir. Now, let me see what you can do."

The candidate approached, and used his finest touch and sense of selection in compounding the tonic. Then, topping it off artistically with a fresh mint, he presented it to his examiner. Mr. Johnson gave the case, his best case, and patience, and finally, when the bottom of the generous glass had been reached, he looked at the young man admiringly and announced that he had passed.

Another story is told of a judicial district in Florida where, before the era of the railroad and owing to the numerous creeks and rivers, there had to be frequent fording of streams in order to make good time between the country towns. The candidate presented himself before the judge, who, after looking at the young man a few moments and taking his measure, asked:

"Can you ride?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you own a horse?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can he swim?"

"Yes, sir."

Whereupon the judge bowed gravely and remarked:

"I am very glad to welcome you, sir, to the practice of law in my district."

Since those days, of course, law has changed. More statutes are passed every year than existed when Chief Justice Marshall brought order out of American legislation. The lawyer has not only to be possessed of wide information and accurate knowledge, but he must be trained in the processes of the State so as to be able to master the facts and details of the new problems. The raising of the standard means the improvement of the bar.

HENDERSONS DIPLOMACY PROVED BY CIGARS

"When Speaker Henderson was at the Waldorf-Astoria before going to Europe," remarked one of his friends the other day to a writer in the New York Tribune, "I learned the force of diplomacy in a way that I shall never forget. It all happened because of some 75-cent cigars which had been presented to the Speaker. I had shaken hands with him and he had slapped me over the back a couple of times most heartily when he asked me to have a cigar. Well, sir, I had never seen such a cigar before. You don't get 'em where I was born in Vermont. They were all wrapped in gold leaf and had a black silk ribbon around 'em. 'Well, I took one, peeled off the gold leaf and put the gold leaf in my pocket so no one could steal it. Well, sir, after I had undressed that cigar, I'll be blamed if I could tell which was the fire end and which was the mouthpiece. The two ends both came to a point. 'Have a light,' said the Speaker suddenly—so suddenly that I made a wild guess which end was the mouthpiece, and, biting it off, lit the other end. 'Well, sir, the taste of that mouthpiece—I can't describe it. It tasted something like cologne, and it went into my nose and started me to coughing. Another thing that alarmed me still more was the way that cigar burned. Sparks of fire shot out now and then as from green wood, and bubbles of sap welled up on the wrapper, and then exploded into little green smoke balls. 'I hadn't smoked very long before my jaw began to ache. I took the thing out of my mouth and rested my jaw a little, but as soon as I stuck the cigar in my teeth again the jaw ached all the more. The reason was that the end I lit was so heavy and the cigar was so long that it kept prying my mouth open like a lever. 'The cigar had no sooner begun to burn and draw well than it began to unravel. First the wrapper came loose and hung like a washing on a line. Then a lot of fillings and what looked to me like brown excelsior dropped out of it into my trousers. The fillings were all a-fire, and to save myself from being burned alive, I dashed the whole business—wrapper, excelsior, fillings and all—into the cuspidor. 'Guess I lit the wrong end of that cigar,' said I, after the danger had been averted. 'Guess you did,' replied the Speaker, after he had stumped across the room a couple of times, 'which only shows the force of diplomacy,' he added, 'and that even a cigar must be approached the right way.'"

"You are an ungrateful child! If it hadn't been for you I could have gone to the Mothers' Congress. 'If it hadn't been for me you couldn't have gone, because you wouldn't have been a mother.'—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Some say it is hot air, but if you will drop into the Manufacturers' Shoe Co. store you will be convinced of it.

An Opportunity for Some Men

The brisk selling of the past few weeks has played such havoc with our lines of sizes in NEGLIGEE SHIRTS, that we have decided this week to offer you the entire lot at

50c EACH

These are not inferior shirts—not one of them. They are of fine Madras, solid colors, full size, perfect fit. Look closely after the little things that a good shirt always has, not one is missing. What are they worth? If we said that they cost us double what we now offer them at, you would think we were romancing—so we say ALMOST double. They really averaged us $10.00 a dozen. But no matter—if you can find your size you are the gainer. We don't promise that you will, but remember the sooner you (or your wife) can come in the better the chance.

"Silver" Brand Collars and Cuffs.
